Weekend in Norfolk promises fun for all

The Norfolk Artists & Friends, a group of 26 artists located in and around Norfolk, is holding its 9th annual three-day show at the Yale Art Barn

Kids' events, like this watermelon-eating contest last year, are a big feature of Weekend in Norfolk.

NORFOLK » Fun for all is the watchword in Norfolk, this coming August 4, 5 and 6 during the town's three-day, town-wide festival, A Weekend in Norfolk.

Everyone is invited to come with family and friends to enjoy the more than 75 events, mostly free, listed on its website, www.weekendinnorfolk.org.

On Friday, boat builder Schuyler Thomson will be demonstrating the art of the wooden canoe, two churches will be offering afternoon tours of their magnificent stained glass windows and the town's first selectman will be performing weddings and vow renewals on the village green (by appointment). Then there are artisan demos, a guided wildflower walk and a show by Sand-glass Puppet Theater, opening receptions for three weekend-long art events and a quilt show, plus concerts at Infinity Hall and the Yale Music Shed.

The pace picks up on Saturday, with continuing art events and more concerts, including an open rehearsal at the Music Shed and live outdoor performances by Emily Victoria and Soul Case. The Norfolk farmers market is celebrating Kids' Day with a variety of special events, a pie sale to benefit the Congregational church and a special surprise event starting at 11:00 a.m. Also for kids, there will be games on the green, a painting workshop, nature weaving and tie-dyeing, and water polo with fire hoses. The evening will be crowned with family games and an outdoor movie at Bottelle School, in addition to concerts at Infinity Hall and the Music Shed.

Sunday is no time to go home — there are historic house tours, garden tours, more stained glass window tours, another concert, the curling club open house, three farm tours, an art workshop for adults, more demos and art shows, fly tying and casting on the green, outdoor music by Ben Waller and others, a photo show opening and a discussion with author Karin Roffman about her new book on poet John Ashbery. The World War I exhibition at the historical society museum, the Hike-the-Peaks challenge, all the artisan demos, the Alfredo Taylor lecture and more—or that many events are multi-day affairs. Visit the Weekend in Norfolk website, weekendinnorfolk.org, for details by special interest or by day and time, and be sure to come August 4, 5 and 6.

The balcony was packed with rapt spectators during Jane Monheit's 2016 Weekend in Norfolk concert at Infinity Music Hall.

Norfolk's beautiful village green is the perfect place to get married or renew your vows. The first selectman will do the honors and bouquets are supplied. See weekendinnorfolk.org for details.
